

Meet the STOREM project team at University of Cagliari in Italy

The University of Cagliari, through the Department of Economics and Business Sciences, is the lead partner of STOREM Erasmus + which aims to increase the skills in the regions of Latin America and the ACP for an adequate management of the natural environment. Coordinated by Anna Maria Pinna, the initiative involves an interdisciplinary team of Unica researchers.

Anna Maria Pinna coordinates the STOREM project. She got her PhD at Warwick University (UK) and has been working at CEPS in Brussels on a big International research project on Globalization and Social Exclusion. She has been working in the University of Cagliari since 2000, currently as Associate Professor in Economics. She has been visiting researcher at Boston University, University of Barcelona and SOAS, London. Her research topics include international trade, development economics and tourism. Recently her focus is on the historical analysis of globalization processes, focusing on the role that old infrastructure and trade routes have had on the development of local communities and tourism. She participated to several EU international research and cooperation projects, while at the moment she is the organizer of one of the FREIT world appointments for discussing advances in the field of international trade. She loves studying and visiting communities that found out how traditional living can be helpful in modern society and generate sustainable tourism.

Paola Pinna is the project manager in charge of the general management, implementation and monitoring of STOREM activities. Expert on cultural management issues/planning and project management activities, she has a long experience in developing international cooperation projects related to local development, the management of cultural heritage and sustainable tourism. Paola studied Political Science at the University of Cagliari (Italy) and then obtained a master's degree in Tourism Economics from the University of Sassari (Italy) and in Cultural Management at the University of Barcelona (Spain), and finally an intensive training in Management of Development Projects at the Humboldt University, Faculty of Life Sciences, Institute for Agricultural and rural development (Berlin, Germany). Her interests lie in the area of international cooperation and cultural management.

Davide Cao is our financial manager. He has worked as professional since 2001 in consulting for project and financial management for private and public organizations. Nowadays he is public officer at University of Cagliari, Department of Business and Economics where he deals with financial management of several research and cooperation projects. Davide studied Political sciences in Cagliari and deep his knowledge with a Master in Economics and management of tourism (Venice) and a Master in Management of Public procurement (Cagliari), over many other specialization courses. He directed from 2014 to 2020 the FLAG Sardegna Orientale. He loves outdoor sport activities, dogs, music and reading.